IMPORTANT CUPS FOR SMALL YACHTS

Special Trophies to Be Awarded in Order to Promote Interest in P and Q Class.

NAHMA IS THE FAVORITE

Notwithstanding the fact that the forty footers form the real star class of the year, the followers of yachting are taking unusual interest in the 31 foot division commonly called Class P. Each year sees one of the smaller classes very much in the limelight. As a rule it is either the P or Q class and these little fellows always furnish the best of sport.

To promote interest in these classes several important trophies have been hung up. Probably the most important of these is the Manassas Bay challenge cup that now is resting in the locker of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club. There is to be a race for this important trophy later in the season and although it is impossible to tell how many craft will sail it is safe to assume that there will be a brilliant representation from Massachusetts Bay.

Metropolitan yachtsmen are watching with the keenest interest the work of the 31 raters down East, particularly those who are sailing for the Junior Class P cup. Several of these yachts will be seen in the races off Greenwich, Conn., for the Manassas cup and local yachtsmen are wondering if they will be fast enough to defeat Nahma, that has been built to defend the prize.

There seems to be very little difference in the speed of the Boston craft judging by the work of the boats in the first six races sailed for the Lipton cup. In the six races that have been held eight have been won by a different craft. This is decidedly unusual and if the record keeps up throughout the season the year will be the most interesting one ever known on Massachusetts Bay.

The first race was won by Nutmeg III, the property of Allen C. Jones. On the second start J. J. Martin's Waskia III was returned a winner. Then Ahmek, the property of Charles Francis and Arthur Adams, took a race. The fourth victory was won by the 31 footer, the fifth was taken by Herbert L. Bowen's Hayseed IV. Britomart, the property of C. H. and H. H. Wheeler, won the sixth race. Under the circumstances the winner of the Lipton cup on Massachusetts Bay will well deserve the honor.

At the end of the sixth race Hayseed IV, formerly Michigau, was leading in the percentage column with 53.3 per cent. Then came the new comers with 52.6 per cent. Hayseed with 52.7 per cent. Britomart with 52.9 per cent. Waskia III with 57.9 per cent. Waskia II with 58.7 per cent. Ahmek with 58.9 per cent. Savonara II with 51.2 per cent. and Straiger with 55.0 per cent.

A change to light winds in the balance of the series may make for decided alteration in the positions of the yachts in the percentage column. The six races under discussion have not yet been decided in a big way. The first race, the Lipton cup, has been won by a 31 footer. The second race of the class has not as yet had a chance to show their ability. And in passing it might be mentioned that a yacht which has won the Lipton cup has a chance of winning the Manassas Bay challenge cup, providing the series is under the usual Long Island Sound conditions.

The Manassas Bay challenge cup and the Massachusetts Bay Lipton cup series are not the only trophies for this interesting class. All over the country there are races for the historic Quincy challenge cup that is to be decided under the auspices of the Boston Yacht Club on July 31. August 1. Naturally the outcome of the series will have an important bearing on the Manassas Bay races that are to be decided on August 25, 29 and 30.

The defending boat in the Quincy series will be Charles P. Curtis, Jr.'s Ellen, formerly the Valiant. In the race for the Manassas Bay challenge cup the representative of the Boston Yacht Club is the 31 footer, the South Boston Yacht Club has nominated Waskia II for the Quincy challenge cup series. The 31 footer, the South Boston Yacht Club has nominated Waskia II for the Quincy challenge cup series. The 31 footer, the South Boston Yacht Club has nominated Waskia II for the Quincy challenge cup series.

The Indian Harbor Yacht Club is not worrying very much over the probable outcome of the Manassas Bay series. The sailing men in the club believe that they have another winner in Nahma. Certainly Addison G. Hannan has won the Lipton cup. And judging by what is happening in Boston, a worthy successor is needed. Waskia II stood sixth in the percentage column in the first six races of the Lipton cup race. This seems to indicate that the former star boat of Long Island Sound is not as fast as some of the other Down East craft.

William M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin, national doubles tennis champions, were defeated by Karl H. Behr and R. Lindley Murray in an exhibition match at the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge yesterday afternoon. The contest went five sets, with the scores 6-4, 4-1, 4-6, 3-6, and 6-2. It was Johnston's first appearance in the East this year.

For the sake of competition and the welfare of the much neglected doubles department of tennis, it is a pity that Behr and Murray cannot spare the time to compete in the Eastern doubles at Longwood this week. Were they to play at Boston, it is highly probable that they would qualify for the final eliminations at Onwentsia and eventually meet Johnston and Griffin in the challenge round for the national title at Forest Hills on August 25.

This may sound like extravagant praise, but on their showing against the champions Behr and Murray more than merited it. The scores fail to indicate the calibre of game exhibited by the winners, particularly Behr. The veteran internationalist and the best man on the court. His generalship and his backhand cross court cuts were remarkable.

An Ideal Combination.

The Behr-Murray combination was almost ideal. Behr provided the steadiness when it was needed most and the plan of campaign, while Murray furnished most of the exciting play, with which the victors game was replete.

Murray was at his best overhead. His smashing kills were aided by the soggy court, for the rain of the early afternoon left the turf rather slow. But for this condition Murray's lightning service, which accounted for five aces, would have been even more effective. Behr got four aces by service, while Johnston scored two and Griffin three.

Johnston showed the need of work on grass, while Griffin looked a trifle slow. The soggy court might have made the champions appear slower than they really were. Johnston's famous forehand drives were in good order, but his backhand, which he was reported to be perfecting, was still far from championship calibre.

A Red Hot Finish.

With victory in the match depending upon the issue of the fifth set, it was a tight game, particularly in the late games. In the fifth game, with Johnston serving, the title holders worked an advantage of 40-love. Behr and Murray rallied and got back the advantage point only to lose the game. With the tenth game needed to make it even, Johnston and Griffin braced to make it even, Johnston and Griffin braced to make it even, Johnston and Griffin braced to make it even.

The veteran had the service in that final game and he made good use of it. Behr and Murray were unable to return his lightning service, while Johnston and Griffin stood by, unable to earn even a single ace. The crowd paid tribute to Johnston and Griffin.

In addition to the doubles feature there was a singles exhibition in which Walter Merrill Hall sprang a little surprise. Hall defeated the former Hoboken, N. J., nineteen-year-old star from California. The local man scored his victory in straight sets at 6-4, 6-3, 7-5. The point score of the doubles match follows:

Longwood Opens Round of Big Tennis Tournaments

Eastern Doubles Will Be a Feature of Event to Be Opened in Boston on Monday—Crescent A. C. and Seabright Competitions to Follow.

By DANIEL.

Now that the preliminary lawn tennis season is off the boards the round of more important competitions inaugurated at Utica in full swing. This week the centre of activity will be at the Longwood Cricket Club at Boston, where the twenty-fifth annual open tournament will be staged.

After Longwood comes the first big open tourney of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge, to be followed by the East and West matches at Forest Hills and the famous competition of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club. The Southampton tournament will follow, and then the culminating classic, the national championships, which will be started on the West Side Club courts on Monday, August 28.

Attractions this year in the Longwood tourney will be manifold. In addition to the singles, for which a new bowl to replace that won outright by Maurice E. McLoughlin last year will be up for competition, there will be the Eastern doubles and the New England sectional junior and boys' tournaments. The winning junior and boy will be eligible to play in the final events at Forest Hills.

California Must Separate.

The double Eastern doubles will offer added interest this year from the fact that the Californians will not be able to play as teams. The rules provide that at least one member of a combination competing in sectional doubles must be a resident of that section. As a result the Pacific coast stars will have to find Eastern partners. Willis Davis, who has won the Rockaway Hunting Club tourney, will make a bold bid to score a leg on the new bowl in the singles. The old bowl has rested in California since McLoughlin won it in 1912. Last year Richard Norris Williams 2d won the open tourney and met McLoughlin in the challenge round. The result was a tie, 1-1. The Comet defeated the national champion, only to have the tables turned on him at Newport. McLoughlin will not be a competitor.

GUILFORD CAPTURES TITLE.

At the end of the first eighteen holes Guilford had a lead of 5 up. Starting the afternoon round he won five of the first six holes played. He lost his ball at the sixth hole, giving Hicks the only hole he won in the afternoon.

WASHBURN BEATS KUMAGAE.

Longwood Opens Round of Big Tennis Tournaments

Eastern Doubles Will Be a Feature of Event to Be Opened in Boston on Monday—Crescent A. C. and Seabright Competitions to Follow.

By DANIEL.

Now that the preliminary lawn tennis season is off the boards the round of more important competitions inaugurated at Utica in full swing. This week the centre of activity will be at the Longwood Cricket Club at Boston, where the twenty-fifth annual open tournament will be staged.

After Longwood comes the first big open tourney of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge, to be followed by the East and West matches at Forest Hills and the famous competition of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club. The Southampton tournament will follow, and then the culminating classic, the national championships, which will be started on the West Side Club courts on Monday, August 28.

Attractions this year in the Longwood tourney will be manifold. In addition to the singles, for which a new bowl to replace that won outright by Maurice E. McLoughlin last year will be up for competition, there will be the Eastern doubles and the New England sectional junior and boys' tournaments. The winning junior and boy will be eligible to play in the final events at Forest Hills.

California Must Separate.

The double Eastern doubles will offer added interest this year from the fact that the Californians will not be able to play as teams. The rules provide that at least one member of a combination competing in sectional doubles must be a resident of that section. As a result the Pacific coast stars will have to find Eastern partners. Willis Davis, who has won the Rockaway Hunting Club tourney, will make a bold bid to score a leg on the new bowl in the singles. The old bowl has rested in California since McLoughlin won it in 1912. Last year Richard Norris Williams 2d won the open tourney and met McLoughlin in the challenge round. The result was a tie, 1-1. The Comet defeated the national champion, only to have the tables turned on him at Newport. McLoughlin will not be a competitor.
